FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

RHODE-NYC, LLC,

Plaintiff,

v.

RHODEDEODATO CORP., HRBEAUTY, LLC
d/b/a RHODE, and HAILEY BIEBER,

Defendants.

Civil Action No. 12-cv-5185

VERIFIED COMPLAINT

Plaintiff Rhode-NYC, LLC (“Plaintiff” or “Rhode”), with offices at 5225 Wilshire Blvd, Suite 218, Los Angeles, California 90036, by and through its undersigned attorneys, hereby alleges by way of this Verified Complaint against Rhodedeodato Corp., with offices at 244 W. 54 St., 9th Fl., New York, New York 10019, HRBeauty LLC d/b/a Rhode, with offices at 9800 Wilshire Blvd, Suite 111, Beverly Hills, California 90212, and Hailey Bieber (“Ms. Bieber”) (collectively referred to as “Defendants”), the following:

NATURE AND BASIS OF THE ACTION

1. This is an action by Rhode, a clothing and lifestyle brand in operation since 2014, to prevent and restrain Defendants’ unauthorized and infringing misappropriation of Rhode’s distinctive RHODE trademark (the “RHODE Mark” or the “Mark”).

2. Rhode is a quintessential modern success story. Its founders, former college roommates Purna Khatau and Phoebe Vickers, quit their day jobs to fill what they saw as a gap in the high-end clothing market. Armed with little more than vision, grit, and business-savvy, they built a vibrant and unique clothing brand from scratch. They devoted themselves to building and promoting the RHODE brand, honing their aesthetic and expanding their product lines, and doggedly working to get the brand featured on fashion blogs and offered in stores. Eight years later, their RHODE-branded products have been featured in magazines like Vogue, and carried in stores like Saks Fifth Avenue, and worn by the likes of Beyoncé, Tracee Ellis Ross, Lupita Nyong'o, and more. And sales success has followed. The company's female founders have entrenched RHODE as a distinct and recognizable brand with an intuitive take on dressing that provides Rhode's customers with vibrant clothing and accessories to punctuate their lives.

3. Defendants—the global celebrity Hailey Bieber and her corporations—threaten to wash away what Khatau and Vickers have built in an instant. Last week they launched a beauty brand with the identical name “rhode.”

4. Built upon Ms. Bieber's already immense celebrity status and massive fan following, and blared out incessantly to her 45 million Instagram plus followers, 9.2 million followers on TikTok, and 1.7 million followers on YouTube, Bieber's new, trademark-infringing brand will quickly swamp Rhode's market presence, confuse the marketplace, and ultimately destroy the goodwill and reputation of the RHODE brand.

5. There is no doubt that Ms. Bieber and her companies know of Rhode's superior rights. Indeed, Defendants previously sought to acquire the RHODE mark, appreciating that the brands could not coexist without confusion. Given the sacrifices they had made to build the brand, Khatau and Vickers refused. The RHODE brand is their most important asset. But Ms. Bieber, who surely could leverage her fame into success with a differently-branded beauty line, apparently does not care that two other women entrepreneurs have been using the RHODE brand name for years.

6. Ms. Bieber's actions stand in stark contrast to her words. In a feature released in Forbes on the day of her product launch, Ms. Bieber laments, “I exist in a world of media that likes to perpetuate women against women... Instead of building each other up, it's about tearing each other down and having trauma and not being able to support each other. I've had a really hard time with that. We're stronger in numbers and supporting each other. There's room for everyone to thrive; there's space for everybody to succeed. I want to do my best to perpetuate that and not be part of the pettiness and drama. I would love to share it with the world and lift each other up. If I can be a teeny bit of that it would make me happy." But the reality is that the "world of media" Ms. Bieber describes is at her disposal. And she has chosen to use it to squash a woman- and minority co-founded brand that simply cannot compete with her immense fame and following.

7. Defendants' conduct is as plainly unlawful as it is unprincipled. By appropriating another's mark in an overlapping product market, Defendants violate both the Lanham Act and New York state law, threatening mass confusion of the sort the trademark law exists to prevent. Rhode has no choice but to avail itself of all possible relief under the law in order to avoid being squashed under the immense weight of the latest venture of an internet celebrity.

25. A substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claims occurred in this judicial district. Accordingly, venue is proper in this judicial district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) and (c).

GENERAL ALLEGATIONS

Rhode, Its Products, and the RHODE Mark

26. Plaintiff Rhode, founded by former college roommates Purna Khatau and Phoebe Vickers, was formed in 2013. Under the brand and trademark RHODE, the company sells luxury clothing and accessories that are crafted with intent and infused with joy, providing the women who wear RHODE a sense of ease and carefree confidence.

27. Ms. Khatau and Ms. Vickers came up with the idea for Rhode while traveling together in Goa, India. Over sunset cocktails, the friends decided to combine their years of fashion and advertising experience to start a brand inspired by vintage textiles and global influences, targeted at women like themselves: feminine, confident, and well-traveled women. In that spirit, they chose to name their brand RHODE, evoking the grace and power of the sea nymph and protective goddess from Greek mythology with the same moniker. The brand is particularly well known for vividly colored and boldly printed dresses in timeless silhouettes that have now become iconic, like the Ella and Pia dresses. Some examples of Rhode clothing items include the following:

28. Today, Rhode has significant brand recognition. Not only is Rhode carried by 231 unique stockists globally, but further, its luxury fashion and lifestyle products are sold at high-end stores around the world. In the United States, Bergdorf Goodman, Neiman Marcus and Saks Fifth Avenue all carry Rhode's high-end products, and Bloomingdales has devoted a section of its New York City Flagship to the brand. In the United Kingdom, Harrods and Brown Thomas, two of the most exclusive brick-and-mortar shops in London and Dublin, are scheduled to host pop ups for the brand in coming weeks. Several top online retailers of luxury brands—including Matches Fashion, Net A Porter, and Revolve—sell Rhode products to consumers around the world. Rhode has also collaborated with other well-known brands, including Shopbop, and has in development several other collaborations with large retailers that are set to launch in early 2023 bringing Rhode’s fashion and home products to a much wider audience at an accessible price point.

29. Rhode has also been featured in dozens of fashion and lifestyle magazines, including Vogue, Vogue UK, Vogue India, Harper’s Bazaar, Harper’s Bazaar Singapore, Women’s Wear Daily, Oprah Magazine, InStyle, Elle, Marie Claire, and Travel + Leisure. They have also been featured on numerous fashion blogs, including WhoWhatWear, The Zoe Report, Fashionista, The Daily Front Row, and Coveteur.

30. Rhode has also been worn by celebrities and fashion influencers alike, including Beyoncé, Rihanna, Mindy Kaling, Debra Messing, Sophia Bush, Tracee Ellis-Ross, Lupita N’yongo, Busy Phillips, Maya Rudolph, Arielle Charnas, Julie Berolzheimer, Julie Sariñana, and Eva Chen:

31. Rhode's growth since the company's founding only further highlights the success of the brand. Not only did the brand survive the COVID-induced economic downturn, but in the last twelve months, the company has thrived. Last year, in 2021, sales were over $9 million and this year worldwide sales are on track for $14.5 million.

32. Rhode's website, www.shoprhode.com—which is the basis for a relatively small subset of Rhode's total revenue—had 2.7 million page visits in 2021 and is on track for 3.6 million page visits in 2022.

33. In June 2013, Rhode applied for a U.S. trademark registration for the mark "RHODE RESORT." The mark, which disclaimed "resort" as descriptive, was registered in May 2014, covered dresses, tops, pants, shorts, skirts, tunics, caftans, jumpsuits, cardigans, rompers, and scarves (Reg. No. 4540333).

34. On March 3, 2017, Rhode applied for the mark, "RHODE," covering caftans, cardigans, dresses, jumpsuits, pants, rompers, scarves, shorts, skirts, tops, and tunics, and the mark was registered on September 12, 2017 (Reg. No. 5286239).

35. Given Rhode's success in selling luxury garments, in early 2018, Rhode began plans to expand into other markets and execute on its plan become a luxury lifestyle brand. On June 11, 2019, Rhode filed two U.S. trademark applications for the RHODE Mark, one for handbags (Serial No. 88468794) and one for footwear (Serial No. 88468798), the former of which matured into a registered trademark on February 9, 2021.

36. Today, Rhode owns three U.S. trademark registrations for the RHODE Mark, including for clothing (Reg. No. 5286239), handbags (Reg. No. 6267443), and textiles, children's and women's clothing, hair accessories, dolls, puzzles, and holiday ornaments (Reg. No. 6539188). Rhode also has pending a variety of other trademark applications with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, representing a host of products in development, many expected to launch shortly (Serial Nos. 88468798 [footwear], 90441975 [men’s clothing, sunglasses, jewelry, and housewares], 90674141 [retail store services in the field of clothing and other products]).

37. A true and correct copy of the registration certificate from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office for each of the aforementioned trademark registrations is attached hereto as Exhibit A, as are Rhode’s pending trademark applications.

38. Rhode’s applications and registrations for the “RHODE” Mark are summarized in the following chart:

Rhode’s Applications and Registrations for the RHODE Mark

39. In addition to Rhode’s registered marks and applications, Rhode has established common law rights to the RHODE mark. All of the products underlying Rhode’s millions of dollars in sales bear the distinctive RHODE mark, which has been in continuous, uninterrupted use in interstate commerce since the company’s launch in 2014 on a variety of fashion products, including clothing like dresses, jumpsuits, caftans, sweaters, and pants, and used more recently on bags, housewares like pillows and coaster sets, accessories like hair scrunchies, and other lifestyle items, like cooking aprons, oven mitts, and puzzles. Rhode’s trademark registrations and common law rights are together referred to herein as the “RHODE Marks.”

40. Rhode also has trademark rights in its hashtag “ontherhode” which it has been using in interstate commerce since 2014.

41. At all times relevant hereto, Rhode has been the owner of all right, title, and interest in and to the RHODE Marks. The trademark registrations for the RHODE Marks are valid and subsisting and in full force and effect.

Defendants' Wrongful Acts

42. Defendants launched their infringing “rhode” skin care products on June 15, 2022.

43. “rhode,” as used on Defendants’ goods is identical to the RHODE Marks owned by Plaintiff.

44. Upon information and belief, Defendants intend to market and sell not just beauty and cosmetic products but a variety of lifestyle goods, including clothing and housewares, using the “rhode” name. See Exhibit B (collecting Defendants’ applications for the “rhode” mark).

45. Defendants good are directly adjacent to the products sold by Rhode (in the case of skin care) and identical to products sold Rhode (in the case of clothing) and are likely to cause confusion between the sources of the goods and as to the parties’ affiliations.

46. Defendants were fully aware of Rhode’s trademark registrations and that Defendants’ use of “rhode” for skin care would cause confusion.

47. On November 16, 2018, Rhodedeodato, acting for Ms. Bieber, filed a U.S. trademark application to register a mark in stylized form as follows:

The application further specified that the intended use of the mark would be for class 25 goods, specifically “clothing” (Serial. No. 88197057).

48. Also on November 16, 2018, counsel for Ms. Bieber contacted counsel for Rhode. Clearly recognizing Rhode’s prior rights to the use of RHODE, Ms. Bieber offered to buy Rhode’s trademark registration.

49. Given the years of hard work and sacrifice it had already poured into the brand, Rhode declined to sell the RHODE Mark.

50. In April 2019, Rhode's RHODE trademark registration was cited against Rhodedeodato's application to use the mark on clothing. Rhodedeodato subsequently abandoned that application.

51. Rhodedeodato filed an application for "HAILEY RHODE", for clothing, on August 20, 2019 (Serial No. 88585955).

52. In 2020, Rhodedeodato filed three U.S. trademark applications, all in International Class 3 for beauty and cosmetic products: one for a standard "RHODE" mark (Serial No. 88788199), one for a "HAILEY RHODE BEAUTY" mark (Serial No. 88856361), and one for a stylized mark as follows:

rhode

(Serial No. 90432582).

53. Soon after, Rhode contacted Rhodedeodato and Ms. Bieber to express concerns about Rhodedeodato's plans to use "HAILEY RHODE" as a mark for clothing and "RHODE" and "HAILEY RHODE BEAUTY" as marks for skin care products and cosmetics. In a letter to counsel for Rhodedeodato and Ms. Bieber, dated April 15, 2021, counsel for Rhode wrote, "Rhode is concerned that Rhodedeodato's use of ["RHODE," "HAILEY RHODE," and "HAILEY RHODE BEAUTY" as marks] will be confusingly similar to Rhode and the RHODE Marks if and once Rhodedeodato starts using the marks." The letter explained that a mark used by a clothing brand and a near-identical mark used by a cosmetics brand would be confusingly similar because many clothing brands sell cosmetics and the product categories often overlap.

54. Counsel for Ms. Bieber and Rhodedeodato responded on April 16, 2021, explaining that Rhodedeodato had abandoned its application for "RHODE" on clothing upon "ma[king] the decision . . . to drop plans to proceed with a line of clothing under the ‘RHODE’ brand.” Counsel for Ms. Bieber and Rhodedeodato otherwise denied the possibility of confusion.

55. In May 2022, however, Defendants again filed an application for RHODE on clothing. HRBeauty, acting on behalf of Ms. Bieber, filed a U.S. intent-to-use trademark application to register the mark “RHODE” in International Classes 9, 18, 25 and 35 (Serial No. 97413184), and identified planned uses on clothing and bags and a variety of other goods. These applications were filed based on an intent-to-use, meaning Defendants were not yet using “rhode” on any products.

56. These applications were filed by Defendants despite the fact that Rhode already had trademark registrations for the RHODE Mark for class 18 (bags) (Reg. No. 6267443) and class 25 (clothing) (Reg. Nos. 5286239 and 6539188), and had pending applications to register the RHODE Mark for classes 9 and 25 for additional categories of goods (Serial No. 90441975) and class 35 (Serial No. 90674141).

57. Defendants’ actions in launching “rhode” for skin care and seeking registration in clothing and bags with knowledge of Rhode’s prior rights was intentional and constitutes bad faith.

Ms. Bieber’s Fame and Fan Following

58. Ms. Bieber is a celebrity with an extremely large social media following, including on Instagram, where she has 45 million plus followers and a verified account.

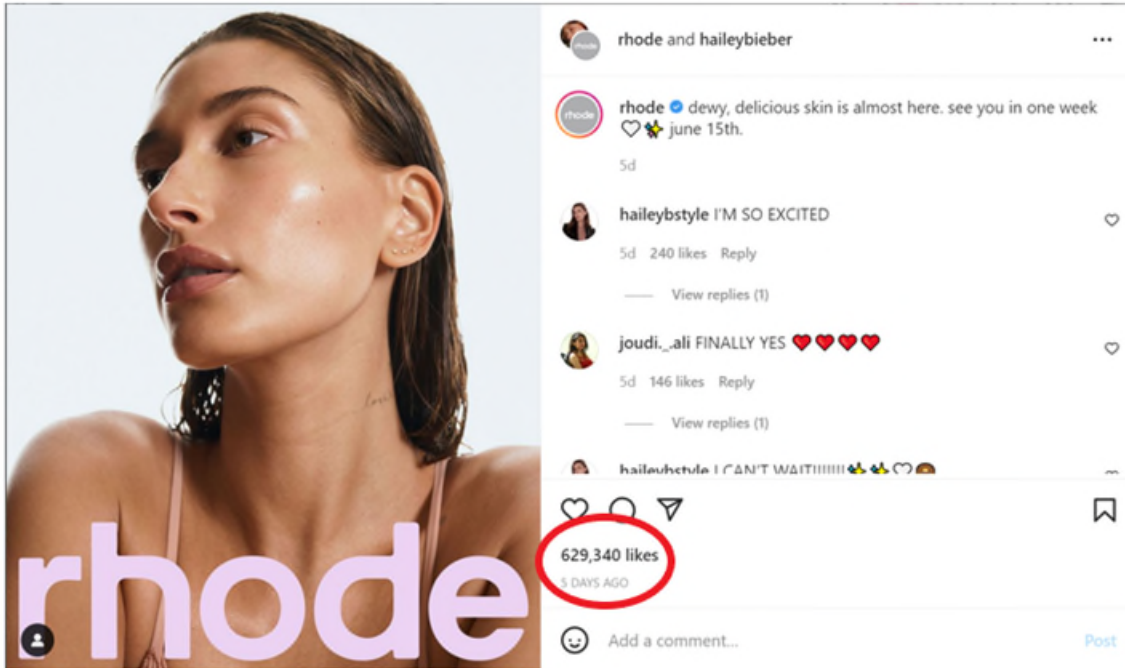

59. Upon information and belief, Ms. Bieber also controls the @rhode verified Instagram account, which had no posts until June 8, 2022, but had nonetheless amassed 247,000 followers as of June 14, 2022, before any “rhode” products had even launched. As of June 20, 2022, the @rhode account had more than 413,000 followers.

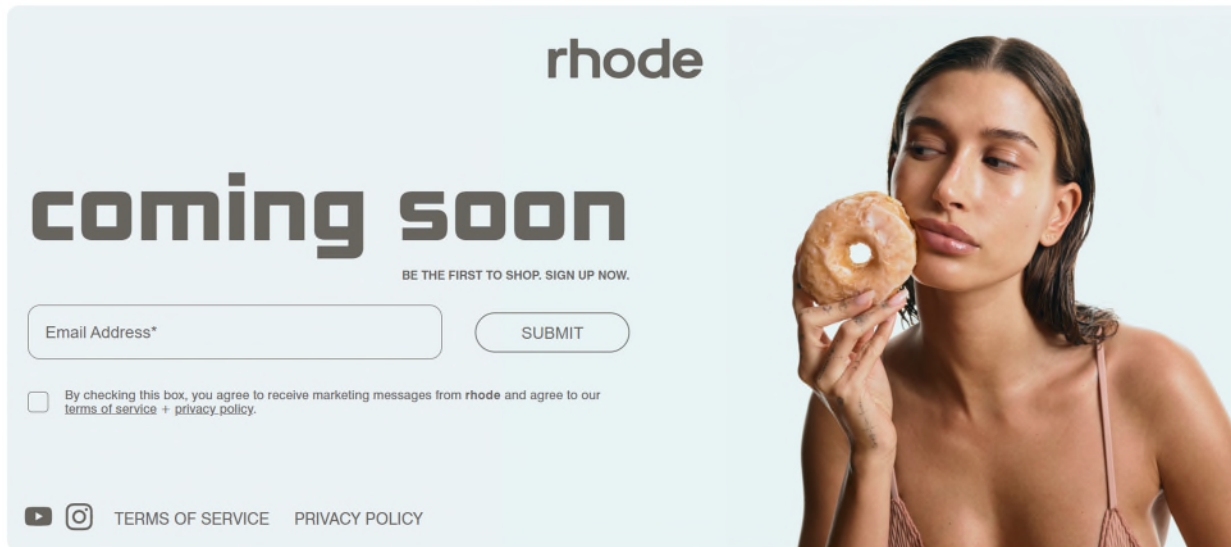

60. Defendants have promoted the “rhode” skin care line on Ms. Bieber’s Instagram account. For example, on May 17, 2022, a post on Ms. Bieber’s Instagram account of Ms. Bieber’s image overlaid with the text “rhode” received more than 1.1 million “likes.” The caption read, “@rhode is getting closer by the day... see you next month on rhodeskin.com...”

61. Defendants have also promoted the “rhode” skin care line on the @rhode Instagram account. For example, on June 9, 2022, a collaboration post on Ms. Bieber’s Instagram account and the @rhode Instagram account received more than 600,000 likes.

62. Defendants have further promoted the “rhode” skin care launch through the website associated with the domain <rhodeskin.com> (see below) and continue to promote it now that it has launched.

63. Additionally, Ms. Bieber's husband, Justin Bieber, has promoted "rhode" to his 243 million Instagram followers. One post about "rhode" by Mr. Bieber garnered more than 1.5 million likes.

64. By contrast, Rhode's Instagram account, @shoprhode, which is not verified, has a still impressive, but much smaller following, of around 190,000 users.

65. Upon information and belief, Instagram has been unwilling to verify the @shoprhode account because of competition with Ms. Bieber. Further, Rhode repeatedly applied for and was eventually given the @rhode Instagram handle for a few days before, upon information and belief, the company took the handle back to give it to Ms. Bieber for her skincare brand.

66. Thus, while Rhode has achieved great success in the competitive and challenging fashion industry and has established a strong brand identity, there is no question that Ms. Bieber's worldwide fame affords her a more substantial platform from which to sell products.

67. Indeed, Rhode could never afford to spend the advertising dollars it would take to match the scope of Ms. Bieber's reach through Instagram, other social media platforms, and celebrity and fashion media outlets. In 2021, Rhode spent more than $1 million on brand advertisement, and the company is on track to spend around 30% more in 2022. But with Ms. Bieber's new brand overshadowing the company's trademark recognition, Rhode would need to spend exponentially more to even begin to counter the damage.

68. Rhode has no relationship or affiliation with Defendants and did not consent to Defendants' use of the RHODE Marks, including on Defendants' goods, their social media, or their website.

69. Upon information and belief, the target audience for Ms. Bieber's products are her primarily young and primarily female Instagram followers. Rhode markets to the same group of consumers.

Confusion and Harm to the RHODE Brand Is Already Widespread

70. Defendants' use of "rhode" creates significant confusion. The name is identical to the RHODE Marks and, as a result, it is very likely that consumers will be confused and believe that Rhode and Ms. Bieber are affiliated, sponsoring one another or collaborating.

71. Here, given Ms. Bieber's massive media presence, it is also likely that Defendants' use of "rhode" will cause reverse confusion where consumers believe that Plaintiff is the junior user and is trading off of Defendants' good will and/or that Ms. Bieber is the source behind Rhode's clothing.

72. It has only been a few days post launch but harm to the RHODE brand and consumer confusion is already apparent.

73. Following the launch, Rhode took an immediate hit. Comparing the results to a search engine query for the word "rhode," performed on June 14, 2022, the day before Defendants' launched their company, and the same search, performed two days later on June 16, 2022, is illustrative. The below results show that Rhode was the first result the day before the launch but demoted significantly in the results two days after the launch:

74. Likelihood of confusion is also apparent from the parties' email promotions. For instance, on June 14, 2022, both brands emailed promotional materials to their respective mailing lists within the same 30 minutes:

75. There is no way to determine which brand is which from this email traffic. Consumers may mistakenly believe that Rhode's products are actually Defendants' products, that Rhode is authorized by Defendants to sell goods for Defendants, or that Defendants' products are in fact made or sold by Rhode.

76. In addition, consumers have incorrectly used Defendants' Instagram handle, @rhode, to tag photographs featuring clothing articles sold by Rhode.

77. One Instagram user asked Instagram account @fashionbombdaily (an account with 2 million followers) to "find this dress"—a Rhode dress—as worn by the celebrity Hilary Duff. Obviously confused by Defendants' use of "rhode," the @fashionbombdaily account mistakenly tagged the dress with Defendants' @rhode handle, not Plaintiff's @shoprhode handle.

78. The dress was then re-posted and re-tagged by other accounts, again with the wrong account linked. For instance, the account @checkthetag, which has 119,000 followers on Instagram, tagged @rhode instead of @shoprhode.

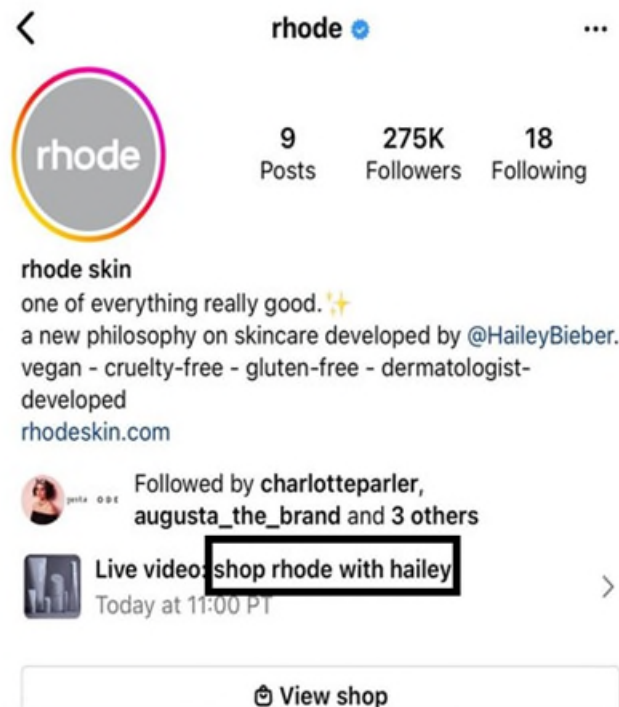

79. This mis-tagging is a common occurrence on Instagram, as evidenced by the below screenshots from the App, which each show Rhode's clothing tagged with Ms. Bieber's handle and not its own:

80. Interested consumers will likely click on the @rhode tag in these social media posts and be steered to Defendants' Instagram page, instead of being steered to Rhode's @shoprhode page. Once redirected to Defendants' page, Rhode will lose the opportunity to convert a consumer's interest in its Rhode-branded products into sale of that or another Rhode product, thus causing Rhode financial and irreparable harm to its brand and associated goodwill and reputation.

81. Defendants have only exacerbated the confusion. For example, on June 15, 2022, Defendants promoted the "rhode" brand during an Instagram Live event titled, "shop rhode with hailey." The name of this event is in fact Rhode's Instagram handle, @shoprhode. Consumers use this handle to identify, find and interact with Rhode. This creates significant potential for confusion:

82. Defendants are also exacerbating confusion and infringing Rhode’s rights by using Rhode’s hashtag #OnTheRHODE. Rhode has been using the hashtag since its inception in 2014 as means to connect with its followers and fan base. As Ms. Vickers told a reporter at The Daily Front Row in May 2019, the brand’s biggest supports have been its “loyal customers who continue to shop with [the brand] and are always sharing their moments on social media, whether by tagging the brand or using [its] hashtag, #OnTheRHODE.”

83. A sampling of images over the course of years demonstrates how #OnTheRHODE is associated with Rhode’s brand is below:

84. Despite Rhode’s eight-year use of this identifying hashtag, Defendants are using “on the rhode” on their website for their promotional materials:

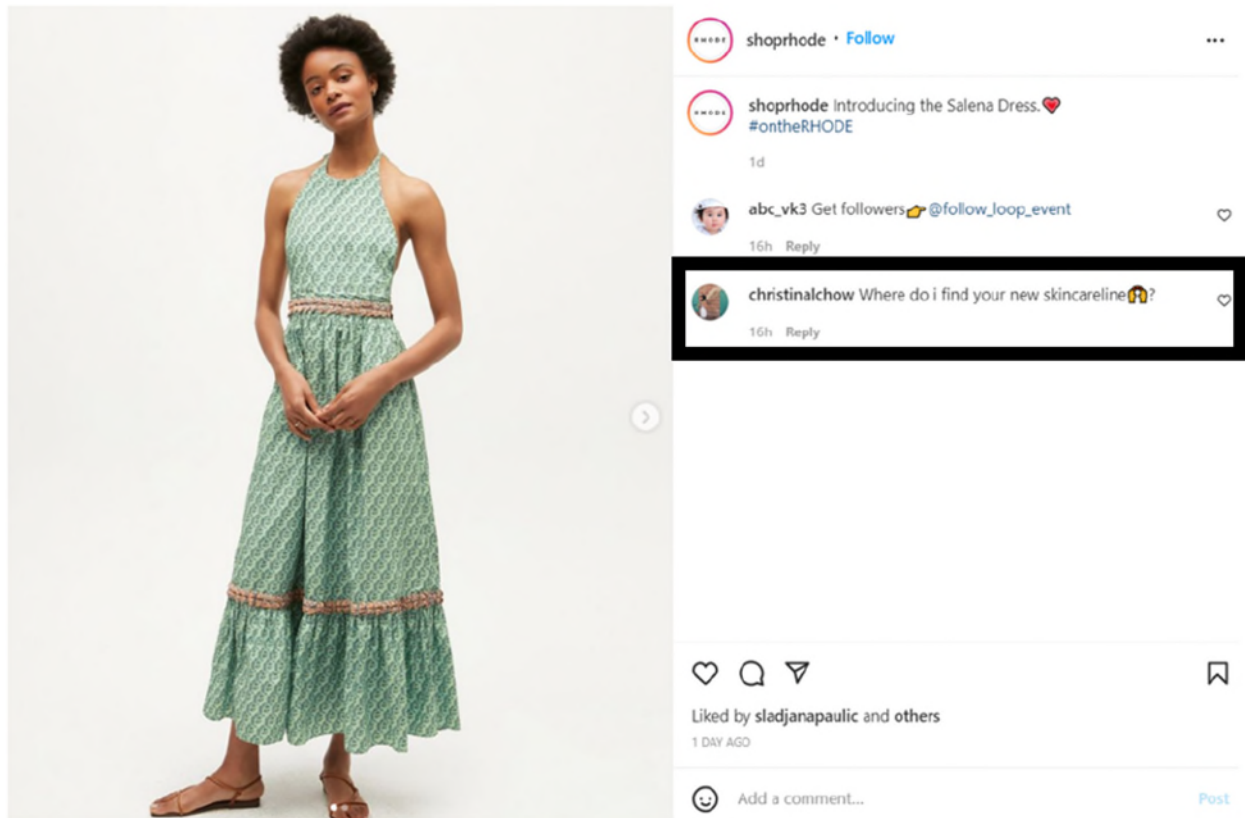

85. Further, in the image below, from Instagram, one user tags Rhode, @shoprhode, to ask whether a dress worn by Hailey Bieber is available for purchase. This is not Rhode’s dress but the user is obviously confused thinking they could get Ms. Bieber’s dress from Rhode (or perhaps thinking that “shoprhode” is Ms. Bieber’s handle):

86. Shortly after the launch, a Rhode sales agent received a text from a specialty store that carries Rhode’s products. The confused store owner believes that the skin care line is being offered by Rhode with Ms. Bieber as a spokesperson. She writes: “I saw that Rhode is coming out with a skincare line and hailey Bieber is the spokesperson...? Is it going to be DTC or are we going to be able to buy it and sell it as well? Nobody mentioned it to me in the showroom and it’s all over social media, I wish someone would’ve let me know.”

87. On Saturday, June 18, an individual commented on Rhode’s Instagram post asking, “Where do i find your new skincareline?” (see below). And at 9:21 a.m. on June 20, 2022, a woman—who had never been a customer of Rhode—forwarded an email confirmation of her $74 purchase of “rhode” skin care products to the Rhode customer service email account, care@shoprhode.com. In her message, she wrote, “Hi there, I’m just following up to see when my order will ship?” Obviously, she was confused, seeking help from Rhode to find her missing “rhode” skin care products.

88. One supporter messaged a member of co-founder Ms. Khatau's family to congratulate them on the collaboration with Ms. Bieber, indicating clear confusion and assuming that Rhode and Ms. Bieber were collaborating:

89. In April 2022, Ms. Vickers received a text from a prominent fashion journalist at WWD who wrote, “I read about Hailey Bieber’s Rhode beauty. Wtf?! That’s your name!!!”

Ms. Bieber Confirms Plans For Clothing

90. The risk of confusion has been exacerbated by recent social media posts showing Ms. Bieber wearing clothing embossed with the word “rhode.” For instance, the @rhode Instagram account featured a photograph of Ms. Bieber wearing a shirt with the word “rhode.” This photograph has been re-posted on numerous occasions. Other posts have shown “rhode”-stamped garments like sweatshirts and robes.

91. Defendants’ launch also focused on clothing and Ms. Bieber’s curation of that perfect pair of jeans or t-shirt, as stated by Ms. Bieber during both her “Good Morning America” and Instagram Live launch events.

92. Rhode also discovered that Ms. Bieber has expressly confirmed her plan to use “rhode” in connection with clothing. On a TikTok post discovered by Rhode on June 17, the TikToker, who has 144,000 followers, was reviewing “rhode” skin care and talked about Ms. Bieber’s connection to certain styles and suggested support for a “rhode” clothing line. Ms. Bieber responded to that post with “Clothes will come :)” This post has been reposted numerous times and liked by thousands of Instagram and TikTok users:

93. Confusion is certainly likely with Defendants showing images of clothing and confirming that “clothes will come.”

94. Defendants have confirmed their plans for clothing by filing in May 2022 (No. 97413184), an intent-to-use trademark application which expressly includes clothing. There is no question here that Defendants are likely to “bridge the gap” between the products they currently sell (namely, beauty products) and Rhode’s core product (clothing).

Rhode Is Suffering Ongoing Irreparable Harm

95. Should Defendants continue using a mark identical to the RHODE Marks the risks and harms to Rhode are numerous and irreparable.

96. Defendants’ use of a mark identical to the RHODE Marks will cause Rhode to lose control of its identity. Consumers will be confused by Defendants’ use of “rhode” such that that they may believe that Rhode, a long-established clothing brand, is merely an offshoot of Ms. Bieber’s intended celebrity-product empire.

97. Other consumers may incorrectly assume that the RHODE brand is now affiliated with Ms. Bieber or mistakenly believe that Ms. Bieber's products are Rhode's, diminishing Rhode's ability to use its registered RHODE mark as a designation of source.

98. Given that Ms. Bieber has stated her intent to sell "affordable" products that cost no more than $30, confused Rhode customers who mis-associate Rhode with Ms. Bieber may believe that the quality of future Rhode products will be less than the standard they have come to expect from the brand, and therefore purchase items from Rhode's competitors rather than from Rhode.

99. Likewise, confusion is likely to cause Rhode to lose control over its goodwill and reputation, which it has spent nearly a decade building. Specifically, if consumers are unhappy with Defendants' products, platform, customer service, or any other component of the brand, and they are confused about connections between the two brands, they may wrongly attribute bad actions or poor quality to Rhode. Thus, should Defendants be permitted to use the "rhode" mark, Rhode will effectively be left at the mercy of a junior user.

100. Moreover, Defendants' use of "rhode" harms Rhode by foreclosing the brand's ability to enter the skincare and beauty market, which would be a natural expansion for a luxury lifestyle brand like Rhode. Indeed, one collaborator has already approached Rhode about adding beauty products to a joint project. However, unlike other luxury brands that have successfully expanded across clothing, footwear, beauty, fragrance, and skincare—brands like Chanel, Dior, and Tom Ford—if Defendants are permitted to use "rhode", Rhode will be unable to enter the beauty and skincare market.

101. Moreover, Ms. Bieber's foray into the world of celebrity-sponsored product empires is very unlikely to stay within the confines of the beauty industry alone. Defendants' recent trademark applications, which are outside the cosmetics space, indicate her plans to expand beyond cosmetics into apparel and other fashion related goods. In fact, Ms. Bieber has already indicated that “clothes will come.”

102. Such an expansion into clothing is expected and anticipated (and here being cheered on) by consumers. Other celebrities have done the same. For instance, Gwyneth Paltrow’s brand, GOOP, markets and sells lifestyle products including, among other things, both fashion and skincare; Kim Kardashian—with whom Ms. Bieber has consulted about her aspirations according to an April 7, 2022 article in Fashion Week Daily, started her product empire with garments under the label SKIMS, and recently announced plans to expand into cosmetics with SKKN; Kylie Jenner first sold clothing under the label Kylie + Kendall, and now sells beauty products under the brand Kylie Cosmetics; and Rihanna sells cosmetics under the brand name Fenty and undergarments under the label Savage x Fenty.

103. In a June 2022 article in Forbes magazine, Ms. Bieber indicated her intent to expand the brand, telling a reporter that her five-year plan for the brand is to build an “empire.”

104. Defendants’ use of “rhode” will likely make it much more difficult, if not impossible, for Rhode to partner and/or collaborate with other brands in the future. Collaborations between fashion brands and skincare brands, in particular, are common, as demonstrated by brand partnerships between luxury cosmetics brand Aveda and global fashion label 3.1 Phillip Lim, Lancôme and Sonia Rykiel, and Sephora Collection and Mara Hoffman (see below). As noted above, Rhode successfully collaborated with Shopbop on an activewear collection, which was a great success for both brands and Rhode has other collaborations with large retailers already planned. If Defendants are using “rhode”, Rhode is less likely to convince potential collaborators to partner, as doing so could also subject their brands to reverse confusion. Moreover, the value of such collaborations will be significantly diminished, as Rhode uses collaborations to increase brand awareness, but with Defendants' infringement, consumers will likely assume that it is Ms. Bieber's brand, and not Rhode, that has collaborated with other, recognizable brands.

Aveda x 3.1 Phillip Lim

Image credit: Aveda/ @aveda/ Instagram

Keeping in mind sustainability, the collaboration between beauty brands Aveda and 3.1 Phillip Lim is aimed at all things environmentally friendly.

The luxury cosmetics brand and the global fashion label launched a collection of gift items, hair accessories and designer packaging products for the holiday season.

The products are cruelty-free and are made with a 100 per cent organic ingredients. According to the official website of 3.1 Phillip Lim, they "used materials like 100% organic cotton for the hair towel, 100% recycled plastic for the scrunchies and 95% recycled materials for the comb."

The hair and skincare products are vegan and are made with renewable energy resources.

105. Department stores and wholesalers typically list brand names in alphabetical order, in uniform font. Meaning, should "rhode" expand beyond direct-to-consumer sales, which is likely, the stores would list one brand, "Rhode," followed by the other brand, "Rhode." Rhode customers who click on the wrong Rhode brand link will be directed to Ms. Bieber's products, not to Plaintiff's, and Plaintiff may lose a sale. It is also possible that these stores and sellers decide it is too confusing to carry both brands. Most likely, they would excise Plaintiff in favor of Defendants given Ms. Bieber's celebrity status.

106. Defendants' infringement harms Plaintiff by eroding the value of the company as a whole. Ms. Khatau, Ms. Vickers and their team have built the brand from less than $100,000 in sales in its first year of business to projected sales of approximately $14.5 million for the year 2022 and $20 million in 2023—an incredible rate of growth over less than a decade. Despite their accomplishment, no reasonable buyer or investor is likely to purchase or back a brand that's entire brand identity has been eclipsed by a celebrity brand with an identical name.

107. If Defendants are permitted to continue their infringement, the risk to Rhode is existential: the brand may very well be erased.

108. Rhode repeats and re-alleges the allegations of the foregoing paragraphs of its Verified Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

110. Defendants' acts create a likelihood that a false and unfair association will be made between Defendants, Defendants' Goods and Rhode, so that the purchasing public is likely to believe that Rhode's Goods are actually Defendants' Goods or vice versa, that Rhode is authorized by Defendants to sell goods for Defendants or that Defendants are authorized by Rhode, and/or that Rhode and Rhode's Goods are otherwise affiliated with or sponsored by Defendants or that Defendants are affiliated with or sponsored by Rhode.

111. These acts by Defendants constitute trademark infringement under 15 U.S.C. § 1114.

Defendants' acts have caused and, if allowed to continue, will continue to cause Rhode to suffer substantial irreparable harm in the nature of loss of the value of the RHODE Marks, its product identity, corporate identity, control over its goodwill and reputation and ability to move into new markets. This irreparable harm will continue without any remedy at law, unless and until Defendants' unlawful conduct is enjoined by this Court.

115. As a result of the foregoing, Rhode has suffered actual damages and Defendants have been unjustly enriched.

116. Defendants' actions have been extraordinary, willful and in bad faith entitling Rhode to treble damages, attorneys' fees and costs of suit and to such other and further relief, as the Court may deem appropriate.
