BACKGROUND

17. A graduate of Babson College’s renowned entrepreneurial program, Sherry Goff founded SherryWear to empower women “one Pocket Bra at a time.”¹

18. The Pocket Bra allows women to keep their “most precious possessions close, convenient, and safe in a comfortable [and] fashionable manner.”²

19. The Pocket Bra is a bra comprising built-in pockets that is designed, developed, marketed, and sold by SherryWear.

20. To protect the intellectual property covering the Pocket Bra, SherryWear spent considerable time and money developing the Pocket Bra Patents. SherryWear filed its first patent application on April 26, 2011. By early 2015, SherryWear had filed a total of four patent applications, two of which were issued.

21. On June 18, 2015, Ms. Goff submitted SherryWear’s then-issued and pending patents, and photographs of a SherryWear pocket bra, to NIKE via “NIKE Idea Submission,” an online idea submission platform operated by NIKE. A copy of the June 18, 2015 NIKE Idea Submission is attached hereto as Exhibit 9.

22. The images below portray the photographs that SherryWear submitted to NIKE:

23. On information and belief, NIKE did not respond to SherryWear’s 2015 Idea Submission.

24. In January 2017, Ms. Goff again tried to pitch her idea to NIKE. Ms. Goff contacted several high-ranking employees at NIKE via LinkedIn messenger including Evan Reynolds, then-Head of Marketplace Strategic Investments; Rick Boyd, then-Patent Footwear specialist; Nathan Plowman, then-Senior Director at NIKE; and Hillary Krane, then-General Counsel for NIKE. A copy of the correspondence is attached hereto as Exhibits 10 & 11.

25. On February 7, 2017, Ms. Krane forwarded Ms. Goff’s communications to Paul Saraceni, then-VP of Global IP Transactions & Licensing at NIKE. See Exhibit 11.

26. Also, on February 7, 2017, Mr. Saraceni asked Ms. Goff to send a “non-confidential list of IP assets that [SherryWear] had begun to market for sale.” Id.

27. Upon Mr. Saraceni’s request, Ms. Goff promptly sent Mr. Saraceni a list of SherryWear’s then-issued and pending patents.

28. Between February and March of 2017, Mr. Saraceni and Ms. Goff communicated again by email regarding the licensing or purchasing of SherryWear's intellectual property. A copy of the February and March 2017 correspondence is attached hereto as Exhibit 12.

29. On March 24, 2017, Mr. Saraceni emailed Ms. Goff stating, "[w]e will respectfully pass on the opportunity." See Exhibit 12.

30. On May 17, 2017, only fifty-five days after Mr. Saraceni emailed Ms. Goff that NIKE would "pass on the opportunity," NIKE filed U.S. patent application 15/597,364, entitled "Bra With Storage Pockets." A copy of the U.S. patent application 15/597,364 is attached hereto as Exhibit 13.

31. On September 22, 2017, Ms. Goff again submitted SherryWear's Pocket Bra idea and patents to NIKE via NIKE Idea Submission. A copy of the September 22, 2017 Submission is attached hereto as Exhibit 14.

32. On September 28, 2017, six days after Ms. Goff submitted SherryWear's second NIKE Idea Submission, NIKE filed U.S. patent application 15/718,171, entitled "Bra With Storage Pockets." A copy of U.S. patent application 15/718,171 is attached hereto as Exhibit 15.

33. On October 20, 2017, Barrett Inman of NIKE's legal department responded to SherryWear's second NIKE Idea Submission stating, "[t]here is no interest in pursuing your submission." A copy of Mr. Inman's October 20, 2017 response is attached hereto as Exhibit 16.

34. While NIKE claims to have had no interest in SherryWear's products, in September 2017, NIKE hired clothing designer, Nicole Rendone, to develop women's pocket bras. Ms. Rendone is identified on NIKE's filings and is listed as the purported inventor on patent applications, 15/597,364 and 15/718,171.

35. On information and belief, Ms. Rendone held the following titles at NIKE: “Design Director Nike Women[’]s Design and Innovation – Bras” and “Senior Creative Director Global Design and Innovation Women[’]s – Bras.”

36. At least as early as January of 2019, NIKE began making, using, offering to sell, selling, and importing products that infringe certain claims of the Pocket Bra Patents.

37. In January 2019, in response to NIKE selling at least some of the Infringing Products, Ms. Goff emailed Mr. Saraceni once more and stated, “Hi Paul, We have spoken in the past, and I do now see at least one product of yours that is infringing on my side panel patent but also my newest back pocket patent that I have a notice of allowance on.” A copy of the January correspondence is attached hereto as Exhibit 17.

38. On or about January 19, 2021, SherryWear, through counsel, sent a letter to NIKE informing NIKE that certain NIKE products were infringing certain claims of the Pocket Bra Patents. NIKE did not respond to the January 19, 2021 letter. A copy of the January 19, 2021 letter is attached hereto as Exhibit 18.

39. On or about July 7, 2021, SherryWear, through counsel, sent another letter to NIKE informing NIKE that certain NIKE products were infringing certain claims of the Pocket Bra Patents. NIKE did not respond. A copy of the July 7, 2021 letter is attached hereto as Exhibit 19.

40. On or about June 26, 2023, NIKE received a third letter, through the undersigned counsel, that the Infringing Products were infringing certain claims of the Pocket Bra Patents. Counsel advised NIKE that SherryWear would take further steps to protect its intellectual property rights against NIKE if NIKE failed to respond to the letter by July 10, 2023. NIKE did not provide a substantive response addressing the points in the June 26 letter. A copy of the June 26, 2023, letter is attached hereto as Exhibit 20.

41. NIKE was informed by SherryWear of SherryWear’s patents prior to filing its own pocket bra patent application 15/597,364, and used its “Idea Submission” platform to better assess SherryWear’s products.

42. NIKE has and continues to infringe certain claims of the Pocket Bra Patents.
